AMERICAN POEMS

SELECTED AND EDITED WITH ILLUSTRATIVE AND EXPLANATORY NOTES AND A BIBLIOGRAPHY

By WALTER C. BRONSON, LITT. D.

Professor of English Literature, Brown University

IN a volume of 680 pages the author has assembled a representative collection of the best work of American poets covering the period 1625-1892. The selection in each case has been governed by scholarly discrimination, and is designed to show the individual, representative work of each poet.

A vast amount of material—aggregating more than 18,000 lines, not to speak of the 100 pages of Notes—has been compressed into this single work. Of the more representative poets, the selections are as follows: Joel Barlow, 16 pages (3 selections); Freneau, 22 pages (11 selections); Anne Bradstreet, 13 pages (6 selections); Trumbull, 19 pages (2 selections); Bryant, 31 pages (19 selections); Poe, 21 pages (14 selections); Longfellow, 80 pages (18 selections); Emerson, 19 pages (15 selections); Whittier, 47 pages (14 selections); Lowell, 49 pages (12 selections); Holmes, 12 pages (9 selections); Whitman, 32 pages (22 selections); Lanier, 8 pages (4 selections).

To the work of the New England poets 280 pages are devoted. The poems of the Revolution occupy 12 pages, while those of the period of the Civil War comprise 20 pages.

The work of Professor Bronson in the discriminating choice of material and in the ripe scholarship which he brings to bear in the Notes, and the assembling of so representative a collection covering so wide a period, combine to make of this book a scholarly survey of the whole field of American poetry, which will prove invaluable for purposes of study. It is offered in the confident belief that it will receive a wide welcome and that it will meet the needs of a very large body of teachers and students.
